SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

- 1. The South Korean attack was instigated by the Americans. Unanimity in support of the American action can be attributed to the great pressure exerted by the United States. Eventual American occupation of North Korea is not to be ruled out, but in the long run the People's Democracies will nevertheless be victorious. The USSR will not intervene because it has no military alliance with Korea and because of the realization that such intervention would set off a third world conflict which would unavoidably engulf Europe.
- 2. American aggression will not cease with the action in Korea. It will continue to be directed against countries with whom the USSR has no military alliance. Sooner or later the USSR will be forced to intervene.
- 3. The Korean conflict gives great support to the World Peace Movement. This movement should be converted into a fighting instrument with its ultimate aim to influence the population to prepare itself for an armed struggle for peace.
- 4. The Korean conflict will aid in the preparations for the Cotober elections. It will alert the people to the threat of war and convince them that the only means of staving off war is to rally to the National Front and the International Peace Movement.
